A Panel Discussion on Critical Topics in Sustainability

Thursday, April 9th
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Anderson School of Business, Room B 209
Food and drinks will be provided.

Practitioners from food security, climate and air quality, water resource management and urban design will discuss the broad implications of sustainable development on their professions, while talking about their professional role in addressing these topics. Event participants will also have an opportunity to meet the panelists in small groups, learning more about these critical topics as well as career opportunities related to sustainability.

Panelists include:
- Heather Fenney: an Organizer for the California Food and Justice Coalition
- Gretchen Hardison: the Director of Climate & Air Programs for the City of Los Angeles Department of the Environment
- Melissa Hatcher: a Senior Project Manager for EDAW
- Kirsten James: Water Quality Director for Heal the Bay
- And More!
